Last Month

Morandi Mania

Joe and Lisa once again provided an excellent venue for the July meeting. The first batch of beer from the Doghouse Brewery of Sharock was plentiful and excellent. There were other beers brought and shared, along with great food accompaniments to the pizzas. Although a family guy such as myself could not stay very late, I heard that the revelry lasted until the witching hour.

This Month

Dead White Guys at Tull-Rebori

Time for Marlene and I to host the club meeting. As usual, the theme is classic WZZ: bring your beer, bring your food, and chat up homebrew and related stuff.

I plan to have some beer on the hand pump this year since I have actually brewed some English beers lately. As always, the grill is available if anyone needs to toast some flesh.

News

Northern California Homebrew Festival

The NCHF is right around the corner. This year's theme is Renaissance, and the competition beverages will be mead and braggot. (Braggot is an ale brewed with honey, malt and hops.)

I have attached the registration form for everyone's convenience. Register now, or don't expect to have a seat at the Friday night dinner!

Judging Opportunities

There are several judging opportunities on the horizon. The club is hosting the AHA Club-only Mead competition this month. Contact John at 224-2947 or jctull@unr.edu if you would like to judge or steward and for location details. We will have the judging at 1:30 PM on the 20th of August. Dinner will be provided to volunteers.

Jamil Zainasheff is organizing judging for the Samuel Adams Longshot Competition. For details about the competition, see <http://tinyurl.com/j84uw>. Judging for the west will be in San Francisco and the Boston Beer Company will be providing rooms for out-of-town volunteers. To register to judge, go to <http://brewingcompetition.com>. BJCP judges preferred. This is a great opportunity to help out with a nationwide competition, and to get lodging paid for in San Francisco. The judging will be on Saturday the 26th of August. Judging is expected to fill fast, so sign up now!
